

Facilitation Payment Practice

The facilitation fee means a small amount of money unofficially paid to a government official. It is paid to encourage a government official to speed up any operations; and such operations do not require the discretion of government officials and must be done according to their duties and the rights of individual and juristic person. The company believes that such a small amount of money paid to a government official for convenient and fast contact with a government agency might be a channel for corruption in any further steps.

Therefore, the company has no policy to pay the facility fee to a government official in any case, because it might be a very high risk of bribery. Also, such actions discredit the company and violate its anti-corruption policy.
